Structured settlements are backed by life insurance companies that are well established, customer-focused and may provide an additional layer of security at a time when physical injury claimants need it most.

STRENGTH

Structured settlements may help provide financial security and stability for physical injury claimants and their families. The structured settlement periodic payments offer two key benefits: the payments are income tax-free* and can be planned out for future needs. The flexibility of the settlement to meet future expense and medical care may make a structured settlement with periodic payments a smart choice for claimants and their families.

Since 1976, the structured settlement industry has generated more than $150 billion in total premiums. The life insurance companies that offer structured settlements are financially strong organizations with a long history of providing various periodic payment products and exceptional service to beneficiaries. These companies have over $1.25 trillion in combined assets as of 12/31/17.

LONGEVITY & EXPERIENCE

With over 1,000 years of combined experience among insurance companies, consultants and attorneys can place a structured settlement knowing their clients’ periodic payments will be protected. The companies you want to do business with are those that stand the test of time. Their experience, expertise and claims-paying ability provide peace of mind.

Deciding to accept a structured settlement may be one of the more important decisions an injury claimant may ever make. Structured settlements including periodic payments are unaffected by market volatility – payments are fixed and not subject to reductions due to interest rate or market changes. They can be used in conjunction with Medicare Set-Aside accounts, Special Needs Trusts, and other financial products.
